"Communicating with Clarity and Confidence: What both native and non-native speakers of American English need to know"

- Native Speakers of American English: Do you wonder what you can do to communicate more easily with non-native speakers?
- Non-native speakers of American English: Have you ever been told you speak too softly or too quickly? Are you curious what you can do to improve your speaking skills immediately without spending hours and hours of your time?

Rebecca shares insights and suggestions for what you can do to improve your ability to communicate your ideas clearly and effectively, getting your point across in a multi-lingual, cross-cultural environment the first time!

About the presenter:

Rebecca been a corporate trainer and manager in Silicon Valley for over 16 years. Three years ago, she opened her own business offering personal coaching 1-1 in the area of American Accent Acquisition. Since then, she has offered sessions at her office in Campbell, in corporations (such as eBay, Cisco, and HP), and more recently, online (live internet sessions using Skype or Microsoft Messenger) both domestically and in India. English by the Hour has been featured on the front page of the Mercury News and on NPR and is currently expanding and planning to offer 1-1 personal coaching in related areas, including feedback on presentations for non-native speakers; we now have 5 coaches offering these services live in the bay area and on the internet throughout the US.
